Forms: requests go straight to the dashboard

The site's forms write every submission into the owner's dashboard as a separate record. Visitors cannot see other people's requests.

FORMS ON THE SITE

Spa reservation request (treatment prefilled)

Newsletter signup

Inboxes in the dashboard

`bookingRequests` leads subscribers

These lists are private: visitors can only add a record, never read existing ones.

1 The visitor fills in the form

Required fields, consent and spam protection; nothing is lost if sending fails.

2 A record lands in the dashboard

The request is written to the inbox under Data with its date and contact details.

3 The owner is alerted

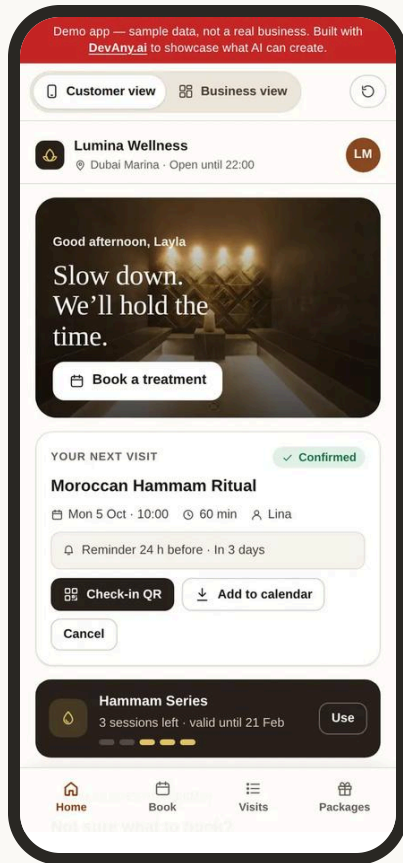

A dashboard alert and, while the site is live, an email summary.

A form stores a request: there is no automatic confirmation, availability check or email to the guest. The owner sees it in the dashboard and replies by their own phone or email.

APPS FROM THE SAME BRAND

The site and its paired apps

The site works together with DevAny apps built for the same brand.

App SpaSerenity

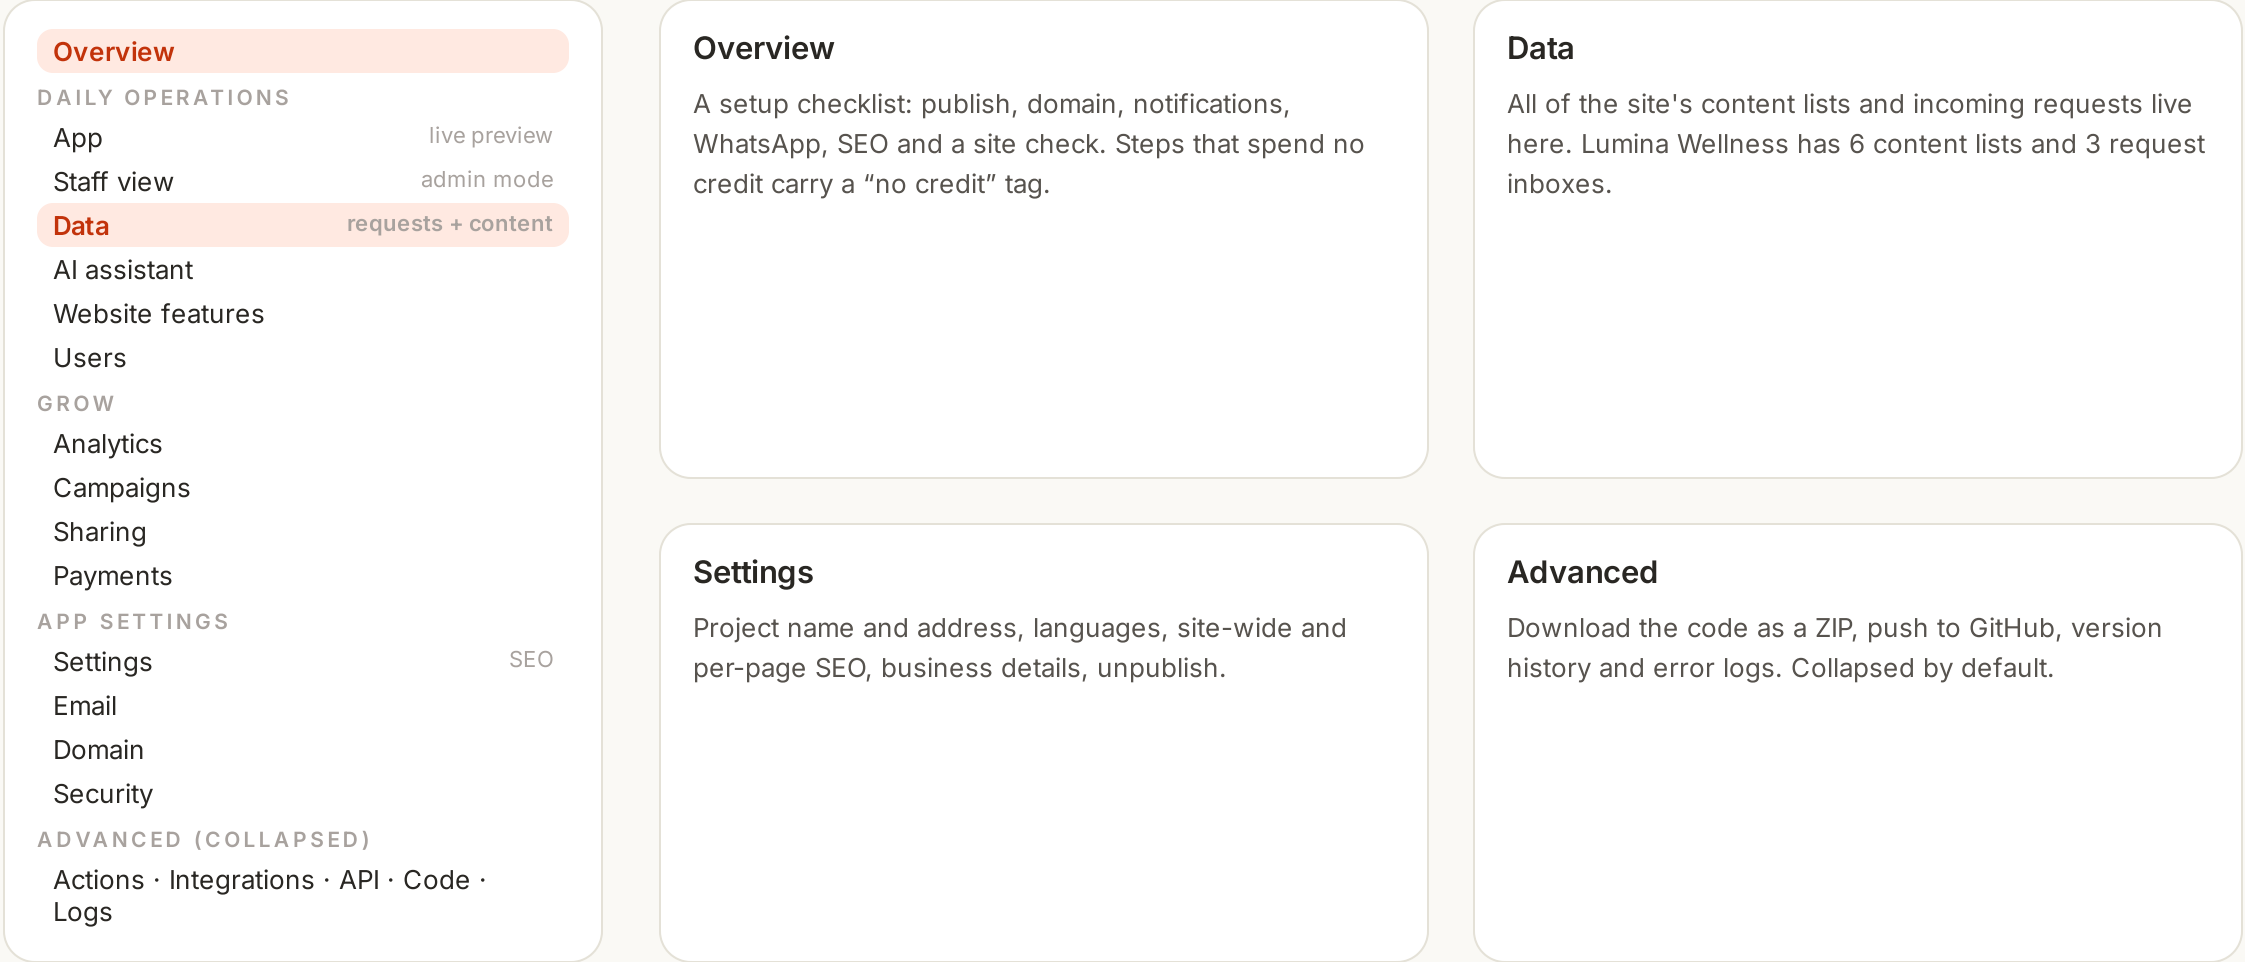

Spa session and package booking: guests pick a ritual, a therapist and a truly free slot, and the manager confirms it on a live calendar.

- Needs your attention: requests with health flags and one-click Confirm
- Day calendar with a column per therapist, shift shading and a now-line
- KPIs, occupancy summary chart and busy-hours heatmap

Map of the DevAny dashboard

The owner runs the project from the “Manage” screen on devany.ai. The menu runs from daily work to technical settings.

Incoming requests

Every form submission becomes a record in the dashboard and the owner is notified.

1 Dashboard inbox

The request lists under Data are the inbox:
bookingRequests leads subscribers.

2 Dashboard alert

A dashboard notification appears as soon as a request arrives (up to 20 per app per hour).

3 Email

While the site is live the account owner gets an email summary of each request. Add up to 5 more recipients under Email → Notification recipients. Free.

Privacy

Every list has a "visitor privacy" switch in the dashboard. Request lists are locked.

Replying

There is no "reply" button in the dashboard. The owner replies using the phone or email the visitor left.

What do you change, and where?
